

I am an Indiana resident who has been very pleased with our state's NO CALL telephone privacy law. I would be most unhappy with any proposal that the FCC might implement that would lessen Indiana's telephone privacy law protections. Before this law went into effect we were sometimes hassled by as many as 3- 8 calls per day from solicitors. I am sure that you are aware of the inconveniences of these calls and know how hard they are to get off the phone once they have you on the line. Usually you must resort to being rude, which makes me most uncomfortable. I hope that whatever action you are planning will not weaken the Indiana Law.
